1. Timeline Émilie Du Châtelet

We are happy to announce that our timeline of Émilie Du Châtelet's life and work is now online in honor of her birthday on December 17th! The timeline is a work in progress which is continuously developed and refined in order to become a broad research tool. Please note that this is a beta-version, a stable internet connection and a new browser version are necessary to access the timeline and it may take some time to load. We apologize for any delay.

Contributions are invited and we owe special thanks to the Centre international d'étude du XVIIIe siècle for giving us access to their database and contributing their Du Châtelet chronology.

2. Directory of Women Philosophers

A beta version of the Directory of Women Philosophers is now online. Here, you can view an extensive list of women philosophers, spanning all areas, eras and cultures. We are currently working on adding a biography and bibliographical details to each entry. The article on Émilie Du Châtelet now provides an extensive bibliography of primary sources!

4. Conversations with Diotima: Ulrike Detmers and Ruth Hagengruber

The talk format "Conversations with Diotima" gives interesting and unconventional insights into the history of women philosophers. Since the format has first been introduced last year, the team of the Center has regularly conducted interviews with visiting scholars. The newest video shows Ulrike Detmers, donor of the Elizabeth of Bohemia Prize, in conversation with

Ruth Hagengruber, director of the Center for the History of Women Philosophers and Scientists. Watch the full conversation on our YouTube channel:
