

XXVIII. World Congress of the International Association of Women Philosophers IAPh 2021: Defining the Future, Rethinking the Past Call for Papers

We thank everyone who has submitted a paper for the upcoming World Congress of the International Association of Women Philosophers. We would like to inform you that we are currently planning a hybrid event. This will involve certain parts taking place in person and other parts only online via a conference portal. We are also happy to announce that we extended the deadline for some submissions and workshops until the 15th of May 2021 and have added a section on COVID-19 and philosophy.

For more than 40 years, IAPh has encouraged and promoted women's research in philosophy. We are a global network for all women who work in philosophy. IAPh covers all philosophical disciplines, feminist philosophy as well as the history of women philosophers. The slogan of our 2021 conference encourages contributions on philosophy of economics, environment, the history of philosophy, and technology and seeks to assemble the ideas of women philosophers on the most challenging questions of our future.

Main themes of IAPh 2021 are philosophy of economics, technology, ecology, and the history of philosophy.

We welcome submissions for the following sections:

1. Philosophy of Economics
2. Environmental Philosophy Including Food Ethics
3. Philosophy of Technology
4. COVID-19 and Philosophy
5. History of Philosophy

New Deadlines:

Abstracts due	May 16
Notice of Acceptance	May 31
Confirmation of Presence or Online	June 30
Conference	July 18-21
